

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

INTRODUCTION.

LAY SUBSIDY ROLL, 1332-3.—In 1332 three parliaments were called together, of which two sat at Westminster, March 16—21, and September 9—12, and the third at York, December 2—11, and the second of these parliaments granted a Subsidy of a fifteenth and a tenth. The Roll of this Subsidy for the County of Worcester is found in two portions numbered in the Record Office respectively 200/2 and 200/23, the first consisting of six membranes of odd lengths, all in a more or less mutilated condition, and the ink in parts faded and rubbed; and the other of one membrane, also fragmentary. A copy of these has been kindly placed at the disposal of the Worcestershire Historical Society by Mr. Everard Barton, one of its members.

The parchments contain the assessments for portions of the Hundreds of Oswaldeslowe, Doddingtree, Pershore, and Blackenhurst; there is nothing in them relating to the Hundred of Halfshire. The present order of the membranes is not as they originally occurred in the Roll, but it is possible to piece them up, and form of them two larger fragments. The following table shews something of the original manner in which the portions followed each other. The Hundreds which contain the various villis are shewn by the initial letters of their names.

This last pair of skins ought, by the Hundreds they contain portions of, to come before the former reconstruction, but the symmetry is marred by Blackwell, which occurs on three membranes, and in the columns 1 and 2. Possibly I have incorrectly identified the fragment assigned to that vill on page 3; so much of this part of the Roll is destroyed that it is easy to make a mistake. The end of Membrane 5 is clearly the end of the Roll, as both recto and dorso at the bottom of the second column are the totals of Hundreds, and to the bottom of it is sewed Membrane 6, containing the totals of the whole Roll.

In the two Subsidy Rolls already published by the Society there seems to be some confusion as to the Hundreds under which the names of the vills are placed. Usually the name of a Hundred is given, the returns for a number of parishes come next, and then the total of the tax for the whole Hundred is entered. In many cases the Vills comprised in the Hundred thus marked out do not belong to it. This may arise either from the carelessness of the scribe who engrossed the original Roll, or from the mistake of the modern transcriber. Since the Rolls are written in double columns back and front of the parchment, it is somewhat easy to depart from the original sequence, and stray into a different Hundred from the one under hand. I only mention this that persons who have occasion to consult the Rolls may use due caution.

The totals on page 21 are possibly corrupt; at all events three values are given as the amount of the taxation, the extreme difference between them being £2 4s. 10d., the largest sum being £441 14s. 10d. If we may take this to be the correct total, and compare it with former taxations, we can form the following table of the taxable value of the county at successive periods.

	Tax.	£	s.	d.	Taxable Value.	£	s.	d.
1280 Lechmere Roll	$\frac{1}{10}$	1,298	7	8	12,983	16	8
1292 ¹ Pope Nicholas's Taxation	$\frac{1}{10}$	1,455	8	8	14,554	6	8
1327	$\frac{1}{10}$	357	6	0 $\frac{1}{2}$	7,146	0	5
1332	$\frac{1}{10}$ & $\frac{1}{15}$	441	14	10	6,316	18	9
1340 ² Nonarum Inqui- sitiones	$\frac{1}{10}$ & $\frac{1}{15}$	649	7	2	5,802	4	6

The present Rolls are so fragmentary that it is hardly useful to compare the totals of the individual villis. The totals of three of the five Hundreds in the county are given, and contrast as follows with the totals of previous taxations.

	LECHMERE ROLL. 1 Ed. III.			1332.
	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
Doddingtree	147	4	0	19	10	2
Blakenhurst	157	14	8	92	2	0 $\frac{1}{2}$
Pershore	269	4	4	35	17	2 $\frac{1}{2}$

I cannot explain the varying proportion between the totals of the several Hundreds; for though in the Rolls as printed, foreign villis may be included in the several Hundreds, the totals given in the original record ought to be correct. In the Nonarum Inquisitiones the villis are not arranged in Hundreds, the scheme of taxation being different; but as the money in the three subsidies above quoted was collected on similar lines though in different amounts, sums in pretty much the same proportion should appear under each Hundred; unless, indeed, the material prosperity of the Hundreds was fluctuating among themselves. It is not conceivable that this was the case to the extent shewn in so short a space of time.

The fragmentary character of the 1332 Roll prevents any useful comparison being made with regard to the population of the villis, either in numbers or names, between the information afforded by it and that given in the two earlier rolls already published. This comparison would be made more difficult, if entered upon, by the groupings of the villis, which vary considerably in the different Rolls. But I have added up the names in 53 returns which are fairly perfect, and which perhaps, as far as percentage would go, represent more or less correctly the numbers of the population in all parts of the county except in the Hundred of Halfshire, which is not represented in this Roll, and is approximately the north-east portion of the county. For these 53 vills the names enrolled in 1280 are 1171; 1327, 1118; 1332, 885, so that, while the tax-paying population seems to have remained at nearly the same figure between 1280 and 1327, it dropped rather more than 20 per cent. in the succeeding 5 years.

In the summary on page 21 I am not able to explain the references to Robert Somery and Walter Newynton; nor do I know what the last fragmentary line means. But it may be gathered that the Roll was not finally made up till after the 5th of October, 1333.

NONARUM INQUISITIONES.—The Rolls called Nonarum Inquisitiones contain a record of the taxation of Worcestershire next in order of time to the Rolls just treated of, and have here been reprinted from the folio volume published by the Record Commission in 1807, the contracted form in which they are there presented being here extended. At this time the trade in wool had reached considerable proportions, and dealings between the Crown and the merchants were frequent. But at the Parliament of 1339 symptoms had appeared of a disposition to make conditions before consenting to a grant, and a new election was demanded. The demand being acceded to, a new parliament was called for January 10, 1340, at which session a schedule of articles was presented, important enough to require the King's personal attention, and he returned to England and met a new parliament on March 29. At this session the subsidy was granted, and as a condition the King accepted the petitions of parliament, which being referred to a committee, formed the basis of the four Statutes of 14 Edward III.¹ The enactment originating the Nonarum Inquisitiones laid down as follows:—"In consideration of the grants, releases, and pardons, of the chattels of felons and fugitives, and many other things underwritten, which the King had granted to the prelates, earls, barons, and all the commons of his realm, for the ease of them perpetually to endure, the said prelates, etc., willingly of one assent and good will, having regard to the will that the King their liege lord hath toward them, and to the great travailes that he hath made and sustained, as well in his wars of Scotland as against the parts of France, etc., etc., have granted to him the ninth lamb, the ninth fleece, and the ninth sheaf, to be taken by two years then next to come. And of cities and boroughs the very ninth part of all their goods and chattels, to be taken and levied by lawful and reasonable tax by the same two years; and in right of merchants foreign, which dwell not in cities nor boroughs, and also of other people that dwell in forests and wastes, and all other that live not of their gain nor store, by the good advice of them which shall be deputed taxers, shall be set lawfully at the value of the fifteen, without being unreasonably charged²." In pursuance of this object assessors and venditors were appointed for every county in England to assess and sell the ninth and the fifteenth, and three commissions were issued and directed to them. The execution of the first was confined to a few parishes only within a county, the second commission was also imperfectly executed; and the third commission was afterwards issued on January 26th, 15 Edward III. (1541). It was in pursuance of this last that the inquisitions were taken which form the foundation of these rolls. The ninths were to be levied according to the taxation or valuation of churches completed 20 Edward I. (1292) called "Pope Nicholas's Taxation." This taxation fixed the value of the tenth of each parish at a certain sum, and by so fixing the tenth, fixed also the taxable value of each parish. It formed, so to speak, a valuation list by which future rates could be assessed; and as a matter of fact Pope Nicholas's Taxation remained in force till 27 Henry VIII. (1535), when a new survey was completed. During this time it was used as the guide for taxing the clergy, and was constantly resorted to to correct the accounts of collectors of a tenth, and to determine the liability of persons and of property.

Pope Nicholas's Taxation, so far as it relates to the Diocese of Worcester, is printed in the Introduction to the first volume of Nash's Worcestershire, page xl; but the Worcestershire parishes in the Diocese of Hereford, those in the north-west of the county, are not included in it. It appears to have been carefully printed in Nash, but there are certainly some omissions even from the parishes in the Diocese of Worcester, if the Nonarum Rolls are correct. In them the taxations of the churches of Hadzor, Bredicote, Bushley, Broadway, and other places are given, which are not to be found in Nash's pages. Nor do the amounts of the taxations correspond in a great number of cases; and there is another matter for which one can see no rule. In the Taxation as printed by Nash, first the amount assessed on the church is given, and then certain porciones or stipends paid to individuals or bodies other than the incumbent from the church revenues. In the Nonarum Rolls it appears that the jurors of some parishes added all these together to get at the amount of the tax; in other cases they disregarded the stipends altogether. In the case of St. Andrew, Pershore, for instance, the church was taxed at 15½ marks, and the stipends of the Abbot of Pershore and the Abbot of Westminster were taxed at 7½ marks and 13 marks respectively. All these added together make 36 marks, the amount at which the jurors say the church is taxed. The same thing is done in the cases of Bromsgrove, Dodderhill, Kempsey, Sedgeberrow, Wichenford, and several other parishes, or at least appears intended to be done, for the figures often do not quite correspond. In giving the taxations of Ombersley, Suckley, Powyke, and several other places, the stipends are altogether disregarded, and only the taxation of the church quoted. Discrepancies in the amounts from one cause or another appear in the entries relating to pretty well half the parishes as to which comparison is possible to be made. The order of the names of the parishes in these returns follows neither that of the Deaneries nor of the Hundreds.

In making their returns under the third commission the assessors were instructed to consider the ninths of corn, wool and lambs in every parish in 1340 worth as much as the tenth of the same parish in 1292. Such an instruction seems to shew that it was recognised that values had depreciated since the last mentioned year; but it may possibly bear another construction. This was a taxation of the laity, not a taxation of the clergy, with which Pope Nicholas's Taxation had to do, and in which the value of all ecclesiastical property would have to be reckoned. Some of these commodities bore no relation to the property of the laity, and they were possibly roughly regarded as forming a tenth part of the tenths of the clergy, which ought to be taken off in using ecclesiastical values for lay purposes. At all events, the assessors of 1341 seem to have confined their operations strictly to the three subjects of taxation mentioned, disregarding glebe lands, tithes of hay, oblations, mortuaries, and other ecclesiastical properties which were included in Pope Nicholas's Taxation. This is evident from the returns for the two parishes first mentioned in the Worcestershire Inquisitions, Blockley and Rous Lench, where the value of the exclusively clerical commodities is given, which, if added to the amount of the ninth, make up with it the value of the tenth. The jurors in the latter case, nevertheless, evidently thought it necessary, in spite of this fact, to explain why the sum they returned was so low.

But though this was a lay taxation, it was not of the nature of those of the previous subsidy rolls. It was more of the character of the Land Tax of the present day, when every parish has to provide a certain quota, a certain fixed sum; not a sum varying with the capability of the individual inhabitants to pay. For this reason probably we are given no lists of the payers of the tax. How it was made up was no matter of consideration with the assessors. A certain sum was to be raised from each parish, which was to be equal to the former tax of a tenth, and this, it was considered, would be provided by taking a ninth of the present revenue; but the commissioners were given a free hand in fixing the quota each parish had to pay. The commissioners were given a free hand in fixing the value of the ninth; they were to levy more than the tax if the true value of the ninth exceeded it, but if it were less they were to levy only its true value, and disregard the tax; but the quota remained a tax upon the parish, and not upon the parishioners. And so we are given only the names of those parishioners by whose oaths the amount of the tax was fixed.

Besides exacting a ninth from the rural parishes, the assessors had another duty laid upon them with regard to the inhabitants of cities and boroughs who were to be taxed at a ninth, which "merchants foreign" and people who "dwell in forests and wastes," or "live not of their gain or store," were to be charged a fifteenth. The men of Evesham apparently came under one of these classes, and their fifteenth came to twelve marks, or £8 os. 0d.

In every parish but two there was a deficit. These two were Tredington, where the ninth equalled the tenth, and Huddington, which exceeded it by 2d., because, say the valuers, the church had not previously been taxed at its true value. In the case of Tredington, the parish must have been exceptionally flourishing, or the valuers were unaware from their isolated position of the state of things in other parts of the country, for though they paid their quota in full, they seem to apologise because it was not more, saying that sheep were few, and their "dragetum" and "palsa" crops had failed. As regards Blockley, the first parish named in the returns, the deficiency is explained by saying that in reckoning the tenth, the glebe, hay, tithes of mills, mortuaries, and other things were taken into account, with which the present return had nothing to do; otherwise it is left to be inferred that the present ninth would equal the former tax. Besides these things a large class of property belonging to a rural population appears to have been outside this taxation. Horses and cattle throughout are not mentioned. Special comments on the state of things are made in very few parishes; these rolls for other counties often disclose much more detail. In Rous Lench a similar statement is made as in the case of Blockley, and figures are given in this case also which, added to the payment for the ninth, make up the tenth; but in addition there is the statement that the ninth is not more because the land is for the most part uncultivated because of the multifarious oppressions of the poor. In Hindlip, Doverdale, and Northfield there were no lambs, nor were there any in the two Worcester parishes. With these few exceptions the tale is always the same; the causes of the deficiency are those previously stated, those referred to under Blockley and Rous Lench, which come first in the Roll.

The parishes mentioned are 150, but of these 8 are grouped with other parishes; Aldington and Wickhamford with Badsey, Daylesford with Evenlode, Doddenham with Knightwick, Grafton and Norton with Bromsgrove, Nafford with Birlingham, and Little Witley with Holt. Of the 142 parishes for which ninths are returned, five were untaxed in Pope Nicholas's Taxation, Od-dingley because it was below taxation, Churchill by Worcester and Pedmore for no assigned reason, and the two Worcester parishes of St. Martin and St. Peter because their value consisted of oblations and charities. There remain therefore 137 parishes in which both the tenths and the ninths are given. In these the tenths of Pope Nicholas's Taxation come to £1,455 8s. 8d., but the ninths come to only £601 3s. 2d., falling short by £854 4s. 6d. Of the five parishes previously mentioned as not having been rated in the former taxation, these ninths amount to £4 17s. 4d., making the total amount collected £606 os. 6d. But the total of the tenths is too large for Worcestershire alone, since Bushley, Halesowen, Honiborne, Oldswinford, and Tardebig extended partly into other counties, as is stated in the entries relating to them; and the tenth for the whole is given, while the ninth relates only to the Worcestershire portion. How much should be deducted on this account does not appear. Of the 137 parishes only 3, Tredington, Evenlode (with which is included Daylesford), and Huddington paid more than three quarters of the value of the tenth, 134 paid three quarters and under, 101 one half and under, and 20 less than a quarter of the previous tenth.

The 20 parishes which paid less than a quarter of the tax were the following :—

Abbot's Morton.
Acton Beauchamp.

Areley Kings.
Astley.

Aston White Ladies.	Martin Hussingtree.
Bredicot.	Oldswinford.
Bredon.	Spetchley.
Halesowen.	Tardebig.
Hill Croome.	Witley.
Hindlip.	Witton St. Mary.
Kington.	Witton St. Peter.
Madresfield.	Yardley.

In these the total tax was £202 8s. 0d., and the total payment £40 13s. 7d.; but some allowance must be made in the cases of Halesowen, Oldswinford, and Tardebig, since the ninth was levied only on the Worcestershire portion of these parishes, while the tenth was reckoned upon the whole area.

If we may take the proportion of payment to the tax to indicate roughly the prosperity or otherwise of the parishes, it will be seen that, as was the case shewn by the taxation of 1 Edward III. (1327), the most prosperous part of the county was the south and south-east, especially the latter, three of the four parishes which paid the largest proportion being in the detached portions of the county, in the extreme south-east. In the south of the county only Hill Croome and Bredon paid less than a fourth of the tax, though in the latter case the deficiency was disastrous, being no less than £25 16s. 11d., of which the jurors give no explanation. By far the greater number of parishes in this portion of the county paid more than a half and less than three quarters of the tax. The group of parishes whose payments were lowest are to be found due east of Worcester, though Upton Snodsbury and Flyford Flavell in this locality each paid more than half of their quota. In this group, however, is Huddington, which enjoys the solitary grandeur of paying more than was expected of it, though the excess amounts only to 2d., for which fact an explanation is given.

The taxable value of rural Worcestershire in 1292 by Pope Nicholas's Taxation may therefore be taken to be, allowing a tenth of the tax for ecclesiastical perquisites, nine times the total assessment, or £13,098 18s. 0d., while in 1340 it had fallen to nine times £606 0s. 6d., or £5,454 4s. 6d. Adding to this latter sum nine times the tax, £35 6s. 8d., of the boroughs of Worcester and Droitwich, and fifteen times the tax, £8 os. od., of the men of Evesham, which come to £348 os. od., we get £5,802 4*s. 6d.* as the taxable value of Worcestershire, town and county, in the latter year.

The Subsidy Rolls of 1332, eight years before the Nonarum Inquisitiones, are too fragmentary to allow any extended comparison of the results of the two taxations. But in a few instances comparison may be made, and in nearly all it appears that considerably more was exacted for the parishes as a ninth than had previously been levied from the inhabitants in their individual capacities as a tenth. In some the difference was very great, as the following examples shew:—

The Rev. F. J. Eld has kindly placed at my disposal an analysis of the names which occur in these Inquisitions, from which it appears that 628 persons are mentioned in the returns of the several parishes. Of these 231 occur in the Lechmere Roll (1270), and 260 in the Roll of 1 Edward III. (1327), while 105 of the names occur in both. In only 12 parishes are the names all new; and it is a curious fact that as many as 126 names appear both in these returns and the Lechmere Roll, which are not to be found in the Subsidy Roll of 1327. The individuals could hardly then have escaped taxation; but how they were caught in the tax collector's net is not evident on the face of these lists.

The Nonarum Inquisitiones relating to twenty-seven counties were printed in 1807, those for Worcestershire among the number, all that were then known; but since that time the Rolls for several other counties have been discovered. The form of the returns differs considerably in the various counties, some being much fuller than others, and relating at more length the causes of the nearly invariable deficiency. The form of the Worcestershire returns is very terse, and gives as few details as any. Still it is evident that the scribe who tabulated the returns, while striving to curtail his work by avoiding too great detail, yet endeavoured to impart variety in lesser matters. Having stated the reasons for the deficiency in the cases of Blockley and Rous Lench, the parishes which head the Roll, in every other parish, with few exceptions, he attributes it to identical causes. It is curious to observe the ingenuity with which he varies this statement, which comes at the end of each return. He uses no less than twenty-five ways of stating the same thing. The following is a list of the variations, with the number of times each occurs.

Propter causas præallegatas	3	supradatas	1
præassignatas	7	supradictas	13
præcitas	1	suprapositas	6
prædictas	22	suprascriptas	5
præfatas	8	supratactas	1
prælatas	2	superius allegatas	6
prælibatas	13	superius assignatas	3
præloqutas	4	superius datas	1
prænominatas	10	superius expensas	3
præpositas	2	superius protactas	1
præscriptas	5	superius relatas	1
prætactas	11	superius veraciter assignatas	1
Sicut superius certis ex causis est allegatum			1

Of the 142 entries in the Roll only 12 are without one or the other of the above variations, and these are returns which do not lend themselves to a termination of this character.

The Roll finishes as printed, no names of assessors and venditors being given at the end. These names, however, appear in another place, and they were Willelmus Corbett de Chaddesley, Willelmus le Blount, and Johannes de la Lee. William de Beauchamp was one of the original members, but a note says that "on the 8th July next following the Prior of the Church of St. Mary of Worcester was appointed" in his place. The Prior, however, does not appear to have acted in the matter.

The following is a list of the 138 parishes of which both the tax of 1292 and the ninth of 1341 are given, with their modern names in parentheses, when materially differing in spelling or otherwise from those given in the Roll, and the pages on which they occur.

In this list of churches occur four which are not at the present day in existence, nor do any ecclesiastical parishes bear their names. These are Clevelode, Kenswick, Wick Episcopi, and St. Mary, Witton. Clevelode now forms part of Madresfield; neither place is mentioned in Domesday Book, both these apparently forming part of the large manor of Powyke. Kenswick, of whose church some traces remain, was an extra-parochial place until recent times, when it was assigned to the parish of Knightwick and Doddenham, though some distance away, and on the opposite side of the Teme. The church of Wick Episcopi was situated near Knightsford Bridge, and its locality is still known, but being so far away from the city of Worcester, the church of St. John's, mentioned as a chapel in the return relating to Wick Episcopi, gradually overshadowed the old foundation. St. Mary Witton, part of Droitwich, is now united with St. Nicholas there, no trace of the old church being left.

NONÆ INQUISITIONES

FOR THE

COUNTY OF WORCESTER,

1840.

INQUISITIONES NONARUM.

COMITATUS WYGORNENSIS.

BLOKKELEYE.

PATEAT universis quod nos Willelmus Corbet de Chaddesleye, Willelmus le Blount, et Johannes de la Lee, venditores et assessores nonæ et quintædecimæ domino nostro Regi concessæ in comitatu Wygornensi assignati, virtute cujusdam commissionis nobis nuper a cancellario directæ, juxta vim formam et effectum ejusdem inquisitionem fecimus diligentem de vero valore singularum ecclesiarum comitatus prædicti tam taxatarum quam non taxatarum, ac etiam de vero valore nonæ garbarum vellerum et agnorum cujuslibet parochiæ comitatus ejusdem, et ob quas causas nonæ prædictæ ad taxam non attingunt, et quæ attingunt, et quæ non; et super hoc proborum et legalium hominum cujuslibet parochiæ prædicti comitatus recepimus sacramentum, prout per indenturas inter nos et prædictos juratos particulariter factas, et sigillis suis singillatim signatas, evidenter apparet; comperimusque per sacramentum Willelmi de Disshford, Thomæ de Clypston, Gilberti Lyger, Thomæ Selverne, Petri West, Johannis Wattes, Johannis Harries, Johannis Dabetot, Willelmi Gilbert, Hugonis le Milleward, Johannis le Clerk, et Willelmi Germain, quod ecclesia de Blokkeleye taxatur ad lv marcas, unde nonæ garbarum vellerum et agnorum de anno regni Regis Edwardi tercii a conquestu Angliæ quartodecimo, Franciæ vero primo, per juramentum prædictorum valent xxx marcas ijs. et non plus. Dicuntque quod valor nonæ prædictæ ad taxam dictæ ecclesiæ attingere non potest, quia dicta ecclesia nuper taxata fuit super omnimodis commoditatibus et proficuis ad eandem ecclesiam spectantibus secundum verum valorem; et dicunt prædicti jurati quod terra dotalis prædictæ ecclesiæ valet per annum xls.; fœnum ejusdem valet vj marcas; decima molendinorum valet xxxvijs.; oblationes obventiones et minutæ decimæ cum mortuariis valent vj marcas; et habet etiam jurisdictionem propriam cum correctionibus quæ valent per annum vij marcas.

LAY SUBSIDY ROLLS,
A.D. 1346, AND A.D. 1358, FOR THE COUNTY OF WORCESTER.

INTRODUCTION.

FOR the transcript of the two Rolls now printed the Worcestershire Historical Society is indebted to Mr. Everard Barton, one of its members, who has not only continued his kindness of last year, when he presented the Society with a transcript of a Subsidy Roll, but has also placed in the hands of the Hon. Editor two further transcripts of succeeding Rolls, which it is hoped to publish in due course.

The Rolls now printed are not of the same kind as those already published by the Society. Those, with exception of the Nonarum Inquisitiones, gave the names of the individual payers of the tenth or fifteenth, as the case might be, in the several villis throughout the county. Of these, the first gives the names of the possessors of Knight's Fees within the county upon which the tax was levied; and the second, a list of amerciaments due to the Crown, which were ordered to be received by the collectors of the last imposed tax. Some portion of the first Roll is illegible, or nearly so, and these parts have been supplied by collation with a transcript of it in the Book of Aids, which was compiled in the time of Henry IV., some 70 or 80 years later than its date.

THE ROLL OF 1346.

The origin of the Knight's Fee is a little doubtful. In the Domesday Survey the land is marked out into hides, and Henry I., when he raised an aid for the marriage of his daughter, took 3s. for each hide. But when Henry II. raised a similar aid he took a mark, 13s. 4d., for each Knight's Fee. Nor was there any rule as to their extent. As was probably the case with the hide, it was determined by value rather than acreage, and the usual amount was no doubt the twenty pounds' worth of annual value, which, till the reign of Edward I., was the qualification of Knight-hood.

To raise an aid of this character, for the purpose of marrying his daughter and knighting his eldest son, was an ancient prerogative of the King, and he had no necessity to go to Parliament for its sanction, as was necessary to raise other taxation. But in voting a subsidy in 1340, the Parliament, by the 2nd Statute, ordered not only that the then subsidy should not be made a precedent for future imports, but that no charge or aid whatever should henceforth be levied without the assent of all estates of men in parliament assembled; by which it would appear that the King assented to abolish all unauthorised tallages. Yet in 1346 the King levied the present aid, thereby acting in an illegal manner; and by so doing he incurred a strong remonstrance from Parliament. The heading to the Roll, however, says that the aid was "granted" to the King. Possibly the collectors were not intimately acquainted with the constitutional law of the realm.

The Roll of 1346 mentions an aid granted to Edward I. on marrying his eldest daughter in 1289. The occasion of this was the marriage of his daughter Johanna to Gilbert, Earl of Clare. The marriage had been proposed in 1283, was sanctioned by the Pope in 1289, and took place in April, 1290. Even then, however, the parliament had a word in the matter, and registered their formal assent. The Commons were not represented in this parliament, but as the impost fell on tenants-in-chief only, the commons were probably held not to be concerned, and the future taxpayers to be represented by the barons. At this time the King had been out of the country for three years, and at first the barons declared they would grant nothing till they had seen the face of the king in his own land. The roll of this taxation though it must have been in the hands of the collectors of the present aid, is not now in existence for Worcestershire.

The occasion of the aid of 1346 was the knighting of Edward the Black Prince, and the need for it arose through the necessity of finding money to prosecute the war with France, declared on May 26, 1345. As well as being levied contrary to the statute of 1340, it was raised at double the amount fixed by the Statute of Westminster, at 40s. from each knight's fee instead of 20s.

A Roll, such as the one under consideration, is useful from an historical point of view as shewing the tenants-in-chief throughout the county at the several dates; and also the descent of estates and changes of ownership, and the successive heads of the chief county families. The Roll contains no returns for the Hundred of Blackenhurst. It would seem that the fees are totalled to correspond with the amount of the tax as set out in the Roll. In the totals for the Hundred of Halfshire on page 8, the number of fees is $14\frac{1}{3}\frac{67}{12}$, while the tax at 40s. for each fee represents $14\frac{1}{2}\frac{17}{8}$ fees. In the words of the total, £29 at the rate of 40s. on each fee is the return for $14\frac{1}{2}$ fees, 1s. that from a fortieth part of a fee, while a fortieth part of a fee is supposed to contain twelve parts, each returning 1d. In the totals for Doddington on page 13, the half fee must have been inserted by some error. Roger Washborne's holding in Stanford Washborne and Washborne, entered as "two parts" of a knight's fee, from the amount of the tax was two-thirds of a fee, and this being so, the number of fees adds up to $20\frac{1}{3}$, correctly represented by £20 6s. 8d. The totals of the Hundred of Pershore are correct, though the number of fees represented by the tax is arrived at by a round-about way; $\frac{1}{3} + \frac{8}{480} = \frac{7}{60}$, correctly represented by 14s. The total of the whole Roll on page 29 disregards the 1d., which arose from the payment made by the Prior of Worcester and Roger Butterley for the 13th part of a Knight's Fee in Shelve, entered on page 6, which is $\frac{1}{3}$ d. more than he should have paid.

THE ROLL OF 1358.

The second Roll here printed deals with a large class of amerciaments, some of which have their origin in Anglo-Saxon and some in feudal customs. During the twelve years that had passed since the former taxation was made England had suffered from the first visitation of the plague, which occurred in 1349. In the meantime also several subsidies had been granted, the Rolls of which for Worcestershire are not in existence. In 1355 a subsidy was granted for six years on the understanding that no other tax should be imposed during that period. Nevertheless, in spite of this proviso, a fifteenth and a tenth were again granted in 1357, and it is the collectors of this subsidy no doubt who are mentioned at the beginning of the Roll. Most probably a special statute was passed giving the king for his own use the moveable goods of Felons, and he would therefore issue a writ to the Justices who condemned the felons, or some of them as representatives of the rest, to hand over such goods to the collectors named. That this was not a frequent method of raising money may perhaps be gathered from the fact that the entries run over twelve years, the date of the earliest circumstance that gives rise to one being 1346, the date of the previous Roll. No doubt the exigencies of the French war caused the King to look in every direction for the supplies with which to prosecute it.

The Roll affords us the names of some of the persons who were in official positions in the county at the time. What was the position of Thomas Cassy does not appear, though he was somehow concerned with the safe keeping of prisoners, as is evident from the entries and also from the last item on the Roll. He was one of the collectors of the aid of 1346, and sums which he had to pay form the bulk of the amount raised according to the present Roll. Out of a total of £87 9s. 10d. no less than £30 10s. was paid by him; and as the greater part of this arose from the escapes of prisoners, it was probably money in the nature of a fine which he would have to find out of his own purse. If he was the Sheriff for the year this would go to prove that the office was not without its attendant disadvantages. Only two of the eight entries in which his name is mentioned afford a date, and that the earliest found in the Roll, 1346. Other officials whose names are given, those of Thomas Somery and Richard Bromwich, bailiffs of the Hundred of Oswaldeslow in 1348 and 1354; John Spelby, Philip Bartlot and Simon Groos, bailiffs of Worcester in 1352 and 1357; and John Graas, bailiff of Wich in 1346. The names of three coroners are given: Richard Lench, in 1348 and 1353; Emund Duncleint, in 1355, and Thomas Littleton, in 1356 and 1357.

INTRODUCTION.

THE transcripts of the two Rolls now printed have been furnished to the Society by the kindness of Mr. Everard Barton, one of its members, who has previously placed at their disposal the transcripts of three Rolls already published.

The two Rolls relate to the same taxation. The second of the two, that dated 1428-9, is really the return of the juries empanelled to enquire into the tenure of Knight's Fees in the several hundreds throughout the county, upon the holders of which fees the collectors were empowered to levy a subsidy of 6s. 8d. for each entire fee, or 1s. 8d. for each quarter of a fee, while the holders of a less property than a quarter of a fee were exempt. Not only is this evident from the similarity of the words describing each fee in the two Rolls, but also from statements once or twice made in the return of the commissioners; for instance, on page 23, when in dealing with a holding consisting of a third part of a fee in Kidderminster, they found their action on what is contained "in a certain Inquisition taken therein before the same commissioners, and delivered for this return." The Inquisition is this document styled the Roll for 1428-9. This Roll may therefore practically be dismissed from the consideration of this taxation, except so far as it exemplifies the method of the proceedings.

The taxation recorded in this Roll consisted of two portions, the one a contribution from each parish in the county, based upon the value of its church, as recorded in "Pope Nicholas' Taxation," completed 20 Edward I. (1292), and so a charge upon the inhabitants; and the other a payment to be made by the owners of the parishes, grouped as these were into Knight's Fees. It is not necessary here to repeat what has been said as to the origin of the methods of taxation in the introductions to the Nonarum Inquisitiones and to the Roll of 1346.

The old taxation of the churches given in this Roll corresponds in several instances neither with that of Pope Nicholas' Valor of 1292, nor with that of the Nonarum Inquisitiones of 1340. Possibly
